What

The Johns Hopkins University chapter of the International Economics Society of Omicron Delta Epsilon (founded in 1978) has reorganized and is inviting eligible (see requirements below) undergraduate and graduate economics students to apply to be initiated into the reconstituted chapter.

ODE Background

Omicron Delta Epsilon, one of the world's largest academic honor societies, was created through the merger of two honor societies, Omicron Delta Gamma and Omicron Chi Epsilon. Omicron Delta Gamma (the Order of Artus) was founded in 1915 by John R. Commons, University of Wisconsin, and Frank Taussig, Harvard University. Omicron Chi Epsilon was founded in 1955 by Alan A. Brown while he was a student at the City College of New York. Currently, Omicron Delta Epsilon has 696 chapters globally.

Requirements

Undergraduate students: must be a declared major in economics, must be a current or rising upperclassman, must have completed 12 upper division units of economics course work with an overall 3.5 GPA in this course work, and must have an overall GPA of 3.5.

Graduate students: must be a current student in one of JHU's graduate economics programs, must have completed 5 units of program course work with an overall 3.5 GPA in this course work.

How to Apply

Send your name, Hopkins ID, and current CV/resume to Michael Anderson at mande117@jhu.edu by June 15th, 2018. Your academic record will be reviewed for eligibility. After your membership has been approved, you will fill out a membership application form and pay a life-membership fee of $38. In return, the member receives a membership card, certificate and a year's subscription (two issues) to The American Economist. Accepted members will be notified in July and an induction ceremony will take place in August.

Please reach out to Dr. Frank Weiss (fdweiss@jhu.edu) or Michael Anderson (mande117@jhu.edu) with any additional questions.
