

Hello Students –

One more week before Thanksgiving Break – you can do it!!! Thanksgiving vacation is the week of November 20-26, 2017. We wish everyone a safe and happy holiday!!!

Nu Rho Psi is holding the first ever Nu Rho Psi High Table dinner. This is an opportunity for students and faculty to get dressed up and meet outside of the classroom. This member's only event is now open to a LIMITED number of nonmember Neuroscience and Behavioral Biology students. See below to RSVP.

Have a great week!!! Happy Turkey Day!!!

News and Upcoming Events: 11/13/17 – 11/19/17

DAVID S. OLTON RESEARCH AWARD	Congratulations  Please congratulate Cindy (Xintong) Yuan, this year's recipient of the David S. Olton Research Award.  Here is a little information on Cindy's research: PI: Dr. Marshall G. Hussain Shuler, Associate Professor, Department of Neuroscience in the School of Medicine Project Title: Does Serotonin Encode the Value of Continuing a Rewarding Pursuit?
NU RHO PSI – GENERAL BODY MEETING	 The "sock-making" activity was a HUGE success with over 100 creative students participating in this community service activity. The socks will be donated to pediatric patients in the Pediatric Inpatient Oncology and Pediatric Intensive Care units in the Bloomberg Children's Center at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Hop4Socks, the community service that this activity supported, is a project started by our own Elsa Olson and Leila Mashouf. They work with the Child Life program, which is a comprised of a team of Child Life Specialists, who are dedicated to easing the burden of intense and prolonged hospitalization on pediatric patients.

Thank you to all who participated!!!
